

shoulder in a small sling. Slip the point of the bandage under the sling and turn it back and pass it to the bandage on the shoulder. If the shoulder is unable to bear the weight of the arm in a sling, hold a second narrow bandage; place it over the point of the shoulder bandage, carry one end across the chest and the other across the back, and tie in front of the armpit on the opposite side.

BANDAGING THE RIBS

Take two or three four-inch bandages, place one on top of the other, and bind the chest with them, securely keeping the center of the bandages on the joint of the injury. Knot the ends at the upper side.

Eric Rhein, Safety Pin, 1997
wire, paper, 9 x 6 inches
Rhein, Eric.006